

The whale with the reading bug has announced Friends Book Sales for many years. Look for it in newspaper ads and community posters every April and October.

A book sale doesn't just happen – it requires many hours of volunteer work to sort and price all the items that come our way, and many more to set up and conduct the sale.

Special knowledge can be useful when sorting and pricing books but is not essential – training sessions are arranged for new volunteers. Our library cannot use volunteers directly so this is your best opportunity to focus attention on the library, learn how it works, and contribute to its success.

Who we are...

Richmond Friends, organized in 1972 to promote better library service in our community, continues to promote its original objects...

- To focus public attention on the library
- To stimulate the use of the library's resources and services
- To receive and encourage gifts, endowments and bequests to the library
- To lend legislative support where needed
- To support the freedom to read

What we do...

Friends organize semi-annual sales of used books. These sales have become very popular community events, making low-cost reading available to everyone, as well as raising funds for special library projects.

From time to time Friends organize programs of special interest to members – could be a talk on book collecting, a travelogue, a library tour, or a discussion of library policies.

“Friends” groups are common throughout North America. We follow the activities of other groups and lend support to local communities organizing their own societies.

Richmond Friends are available to assist at library events or programs when needed.

How to join us...

Membership in Friends of the Richmond Library is open to all who support the objects of the society.

The membership year begins with the annual meeting in November, but new members are welcome any time. Please complete this application and mail it, together with your fee, to the address below, or leave it with library staff, and Friends of the Library will contact you.
